

High school students learn their rights... Alder Grange became one of the first high schools to achieve a prestigious Unicef standard of Rights Respecting Schools.

Catherine Smyth Media linked the story along with a photograph with Sylvia Lancaster, whose daughter Sophie was murdered for dressing differently, and by doing so the story was published in the Lancashire Telegraph at (read it here) and it was also in Rossendale Free Press and on About My Area and Ask Rossendale websites.